Test Result	Negative
Type of Test	HIV-1 Antibody
Date Sample Tested	10/19/09

A "negative" result means antibodies to HIV-1 were not found in your test sample. A negative test result generally means you are not infected with HIV-1. This service may yield a negative result if you were infected during the six months before this testing, because antibodies to HIV-1 do not develop immediately after infection occurs. You should be evaluated by a physician of your choice if you become ill or if you remain concerned that you could be infected with HIV-1.

INFORMATION FOR YOUR PHYSICIAN: The test used for this analysis is the bioMerieux Vironostika® HIV-1 Microelisa System or the Genetic Systems™ rLAV EIA. If this EIA was nonreactive or not repeatedly reactive, no confirmatory testing was performed and the result was reported negative. If the EIA was repeatedly reactive, then an IFA confirmatory test, the Sanochemia Pharmazeutika Fluorognost™ HIV-1 IFA, was performed and was found to be negative for HIV-1 antibodies. If there is a chance your patient could have been exposed to HIV-1 during six months prior to this test date, we recommend re-testing him/her with an FDA-approved HIV-1 Screening test such as the bioMerieux Vironostika® HIV-1 Microelisa System or the Genetic Systems™ rLAV EIA. The vast majority of HIV-1 infected individuals develop antibodies within 6 months of exposure. Vironostika® is a trademark of bioMerieux Corporation, Durham, NC, Genetic Systems™ is a trademark of Bio-Rad Laboratories and Fluorognost™ is a trademark of Sanochemia Pharmazeutika, Vienna, Austria.
